Left Bank, Souk al Bahar

Don't walk into Dubai's latest Left Bank addition expecting the rowdy, pub-club ambiance of its Madinat counterpart. Instead, you'll find yourself pleasantly surprised by the little slice of chic inside, located in an empty shopping mall. With its moody lighting and music, squishy leather banquettes and impressive drinks list, the place is like a beaming light in the rocky seas of Dubai's cocktail bar scene. It may be a struggle to find enough seating for a big gang on weekends – the place is usually busy, already – but once settled, it has a pleasantly intimate vibe. The staff is friendly and efficient – though perhaps not numerous enough to deal with the masses – and there's a veritable rainbow of bottles behind the bar
